To whom it may concern,

I was more than a little shocked that the Department of Justice would settle the anti-trust suit, in which it was clearly shown that Microsoft had used monopolistic business practices taken to the extreme, with something that is significantly less than a slap on the wrist. Microsoft has in the past, and continues today to use illegal monopolistic business practices. The punishment should fit the crime! Microsoft should be required to divest itself of all operations not directly related to it's operating system. This was one of the original, and in my opinion the best, possible consequences for their so blatantly breaking the laws of our country. I would like to go on record as strongly opposing the current settlement as it does not address in any way the behavior Microsoft exhibited (and again, continues to exhibit).

Thank You,
